Pier pressure: Light rail possible for waterfront

Light rail. With Pier 53 set to open this summer and Pier 68 set for 2015, the traffic patterns renew the debate over trolley lines.

Penn's Landing visitors cross old trolley tracks on Delaware Avenue. / PAIGE OZAROSKI, METRO

Joe Forkin was shocked at how many people rode bikes, walked or bused to the Delaware River Waterfront to visit its newest attraction, the pop-up Spruce Street Harbor Park. "It just shows the shift in thinking from automobile to other modes," he said.

Forkin, VP for operations and development at the Delaware River Waterfront Corporation, said transportation planning has been a big part of future waterfront planning.

Five years ago, he said, local organizations researched whether a trolley running on existing rail lines along Delaware Avenue would help improve traffic there. In the end, it was deemed unfeasible.

Quoted

"And there are pockets that the DRWC has been dealing with in an attempt to spur some higher density, mixed land use ... but it's been slow coming." Comati

With new projects pushing forward — such as plans to link more than a dozen waterfront parks from Pier 70 to Pier 53 connected by the Delaware Trail — have reignited public discussions on a possible light rail system.

According to SEPTA, officials have not had any discussions with the Delaware River Waterfront Corporation about adding a trolley.

Byron Comati, SEPTA's director of strategic planning, said the feasibility study asked questions such as: Does it make sense to put in a line that simply goes up and down Delaware Avenue all day?

"As a planner, there is a fair amount of attraction for a light-rail service," he said, "But it has to connect up better. And just running north and south along Delaware Avenue in and of itself is not sufficient cause for that type of investment. You really need to link up some big origins and destinations, and it would be useful for it to link up with the existing light-rail system. And how would you do that?"

Forkin said the group has spoken with SEPTA about adding more buses and even shuttle service to the waterfront.

But, Forkin said, if more people to choose to live on the waterfront, it might become a need.

"And at some point I think there will be that tipping point to say, 'OK, this type of mass transit is needed.'"

Butt officer! Giroux jailed for fondling cop

Philadelphia Flyers center and captain Claude Giroux has reportedly been arrested in Ottawa, Canada after an incident involving a police officer, several reports are saying.

Giroux, while allegedly intoxicated, repeatedly grabbed the buttocks of a male police officer outside the Great Canadian Cabin, a bar in the Byward Market club district.

Eyewitnesses say the 26-year-old was seen inside an Ottawa police cruiser around 9 p.m. on July 1. Further reporters indicate the two-time NHL all-star spent the night in jail and was released on Wednesday. No charges are expected to be filed against the hockey player.

Reports say he lives in Ottawa in the off-season. He was allegedly there celebrating Canada Day with friends. METRO

Gehry: Art museum will rival the Met

Renovation. The famous architect unveiled his master plan for the famous building.

Shown here is the rendering for the new Lenfest Hall. The entirety of the design will likely take more than a decade to fully realize. / PROVIDED

As the Philadelphia Museum of Art unveiled its master plan for the renovation and expansion of its iconic building last week, world-renowned architect Frank Gehry referred to the experience as "extra-terrestrial." He likened the years-long process to time travel, calling his design a collaboration with original architects Horace Trumbauer and Julian Abele.

The plan, now on display at the museum in an exhibition titled "Making a Classic Modern," calls for the addition of more than 169,000 square feet of new exhibition space, including new galleries beneath the East Terrace with a skylight in place of the current fountain and a window through the "Rocky steps"; the renovation of Lenfest Hall, the museum's west entrance; the reopening of a public entrance on Kelly Drive and a vaulted walkway, both closed to the public for decades; and a new 299-seat auditorium.

Visit Metro.us for more museum renderings from Frank Gehry.

"I'm ready to put this up against the Met anytime," Gehry said, referring to New York City's Metropolitan Museum of Art.

"The Met wasn't blessed with the kind of DNA that allows it to do what we're doing here, which is to make this building a more powerful symbol of the city of Philadelphia. I think it's a bloody miracle."

Crisis. Five critical in food truck explosion

As of Wednesday evening, five people were still in critical condition after the explosion of a propane tank on a lunch truck on Third Street and Wyoming Avenue in Feltonville on Tuesday, police said.

The injured includes four employees and one pedestrian. The employees include the female truck driver, 42, along with her 17-year-old daughter and a 27-year-old relative who were sent to Temple Hospital along with the male pedestrian, 23. Additionally, a 13-year-old female relative of the truck driver was sent to St. Christopher's Hospital.

As of Wednesday, five others have had their injuries treated. Two males, ages 18 and 31, and two females, ages 17 and 18, were released from Einstein, and a 24-year-old female was released from Hahnemann.

The ATF Arson and Explosives Task Force will continue the investigation along with East Detective Division and the Fire Marshal. METRO

Funds. Prince Music Theater may close

The Prince Music Theater will close its doors in November unless new donors raise nearly $2 million to keep it open, officials said.

The new funds needed — about $1.6 million — would allow Prince to operate and support a programming schedule for the 2014-2015 season.

James E. Hines, executive director since February 2013, described the decision as a "responsible" way of ensuring the theater stays open beyond the date.

"We don't feel comfortable that we are going to be able to achieve what we need to," Hines said. "So we decided to pick a date to close because we don't want to put anybody in a position where we don't have the funding to continue."

Hines said the Board of Directors is entertaining anyone who wants to come in as a leader to support the theater. JEREMY RODRIGUEZ

Hard times

The theater has had difficulty raising funds since the death of Herb Lotman, its chairman and chief fundraiser, in May.

Private job gains in June

U.S. private-sector hiring hit a 1.5-year high in June, reinforcing views that momentum was building to carry the economy through the rest of the year after a dismal start.

The report from payrolls processor ADP added to other bullish data ranging from manufacturing to auto sales that has suggested the economy has bounced back after a first-quarter slump.

Private employers added 281,000 workers to payrolls last month, up from 179,000 in May, ADP said. June's increase was the largest since November 2012.

Violent video gamer, but virtuous person

Study. Virtual bad behavior makes players more sensitive to moral issues in real life.

The violence often criticized in video games may actually be contributing to better behavior outside of the virtual realm.

A new study out of the University of Buffalo says the moral issues that confront players in a game can stick with them once they've stopped playing, creating a sense of awareness for the societal codes they violated.

"Rather than leading players to become less moral, this research suggests that violent video game play may actually lead to increased moral sensitivity," Matthew Grizzard, who led the study, said in a statement. "This may, as it does in real life, provoke players to engage in voluntary behavior that benefits others."

Grizzard and his team found that instead of an illicit thrill, immoral behavior committed in a video game left the players feeling guilty in real life. That remorse made the players more sensitive to upholding the same moral codes they trampled on during gameplay.

"We suggest that prosocial behavior also may result when guilt is provoked by virtual behavior," he said.

The study combined gaming with intuitive morality. Half of the 185 participants were asked to either recall a real event that would induce guilt or play a violent game as a terrorist. The other half recounted non-guilty scenarios and played the same game but as a U.N. soldier.

In the game, all the players were instructed to violate two of five moral issues: care/harm, fairness/reciprocity, in-group loyalty, respect for authority and purity/sanctity.

After playing the game or recalling the memories, subjects rated themselves on a guilt scale and filled out a moral foundations questionnaire.

"Our findings suggest that emotional experiences evoked by media exposure can increase the intuitive foundations upon which human beings make moral judgments," Grizzard said.

HE PROBABLY REGRETTED DOING THAT LATER.

4 'Problem'

Ariana Grande featuring Iggy Azalea
Just like Pharrell Williams in the summer of 2013, Iggy Azalea has her hands in two separate collaborations that are vying for the Song of the Summer title. "Fancy" pairs her with Charli XCX — who wrote a previous summer hit, Icona Pop's "I Love It" — for a super sing-along chorus and words that are the very stuff that Lorde successfully made fun of on last year's "Royals." And though "Problems" is a showcase for Ariana Grande, Iggy Iggs gets some good rhymes off. Big Sean gets an odd star turn here too, whispering "one less problem without you" against a deep sub-bass boom.

2 'Turn Down for What'

DJ Snake & Lil Jon
There are only 12 words in this song, said over and over in Lil Jon's inimitable voice.

3 'Sing'

Ed Sheeran
This red-haired Brit has out-JTed Justin Timberlake with this something-for-everyone song. He gets sultry against a jazzy acoustic strum, gives one of the catchiest "oh ohh ohh" choruses since Arcade Fire and he raps about weed and tequila, all in a charming accent.

5 'Talk Dirty'

Jason Derulo featuring 2 Chainz
Jason Derulo singing about lipstick stains on his passport, 2 Chainz using high school health class terms to rap about "international oral sex" and the snake charmer sax riff make for a combo so ridiculous that it could easily be mistaken for an Andy Samberg SNL Digital Short, which is also why it's awesome.

6 'Good Kisser'

Usher
Jason Derulo isn't the only one bragging about traveling the world and doing things with his mouth with the people he's met. Usher channels his inner Prince over a fat, stumbling bassline in this tune, which will inevitably segue into the Purple One's 1986 summer hall of famer, "Kiss."

Visit Metro.us to download a free summer mix for your barbecue.

7 'Do It Again'

Royksopp & Robyn
No longer dancing on her own, our favorite Swedish nymph is now working with a pair of Norwegian producers who have given her material a colder edge.

8 'Money on My Mind'

Sam Smith
At first listen Sam Smith might sound like sound like the type of act you'd laugh at on a local cable access talent show, but soon enough you'll be raving to your friends how Sam Smith is the male version of Adele.

9 'Summer'

Calvin Harris
Who'd've thunk a few years ago that DJs singing on their own songs would be a good thing? Though the title feels like an attempt to stage a coup on the Song of the Summer honor, there's something underneath the surface that hints at this season's temperance. The leaves turn brown and the subject of the song lied to the guy who once found love in a hopeless place.

10 'Come Get It Bae'

Pharrell Williams
Two-time 2013 Song of the Summer champ Pharrell Williams tosses his oversized ranger hat into the ring for the 2014 title with this Earth, Wind and Fire-y follow-up to the spring's ubiquitous "Happy."

11 'Chandelier'

Sia
Sia sounds like Rihanna, if Rihanna could actually sing. She belts out the carpe diem chorus so strongly that it's guaranteed to inspire some off-key versions come "American Idol" tryouts.

12 'Pills N Potions'

Nicki Minaj
"Super Bass" was a 2011 contender for Song of the Summer and "Starships" was a dominating force on the charts in summer of 2012. This return is definitely a subdued effort, but it's summer and it's Nicki Minaj, so you need her on your mix.

'She Looks So Perfect'

5 Seconds of Summer
These punky poppers from Down Under singing about how hot a girl looks in American Apparel underwear are basically this summer's Hot Chelle Rae. You don't remember them? Exactly. That doesn't mean you can't dig it now.

3 Reasons to go see this

Dystopian thriller. This star-studded South Korean "Snowpiercer" arrives overseas quietly in America. It deserves a bigger welcome.

"Captain America" star Chris Evans (center, between John Hurt and Jamie Bell) plays a downtrodden man fighting his way through a class-divided train in "Snowpiercer." / RADIUS-TWC

1 It's a big movie
"Snowpiercer" isn't a mere import; it's a mainstream film. Not only that, it has big familiar-to-America stars. It's 2031, and the world has frozen over. Those who survived live aboard a train plowing around the world in a giant circle, which unfortunately is segmented into class, with the downtrodden int he back. Chris Evans leads the latest attempt to fight the way to the front.

2 It was a hit everywhere else
It's "only" the 10th highest-grossing homemade South Korean film in history. No. 1 is the monster movie "The Host," also by "Snowpiercer" director Bong Joon-ho. It was also famously mistreated by Harvey Weinstein, who nearly released it here with 20 minutes shorn. Improbably, sense prevailed.

3 It masterfully mixes tone
Bong has a very goofy sense of humor, but he also loves to take his films to truly dark places. "Snowpiercer" is a very funny satire, especially as Evans and cast progress through cars, each one a riotous surprise. Tilda Swinton is also on hand to steal the movie as one of the heartless baddies, with giant fake teeth, granny glasses and a hilarious Yorkshire accent. At the same time, it's fearless and brutal, picking off characters both nice and nicely evil.

Anniversary. 'A Hard Day's Night' turns 50

On July 6, 1964, a low-budget black-and-white English musical made on the quick — because it was assumed its stars were a waning fad — hit British screens. "A Hard Day's Night" was assumed to be another "jukebox musical," the term for the frivolous movies that made to tout hot bands.

But its stars, The Beatles, never wanted it that way. They wound up with an adveturous studio (United Artists) and an exciting director (Richard Lester), and a movie that was bound to make money became beloved as well.

"A Hard Day's Night," which didn't reach America till August of '64, has been dusted off again for its 50th, hitting theaters as well as store shelves in a souped-up set from The Criterion Collection.

A theater viewing is ideal for a movie this loud and euphoric, though it's a euphoria that sits beside despair. Screenwriter Alun Owen hung out with the band before filming, to prepare, and found them, as he put it, "prisoners of their own success." Luckily they're too young to be down for long. MATT PRIGGE

Ebert goes to the movies

Profile. The doc on the late film critic will make you cry like a baby.

Roger Ebert and Gene Siskel are seen in their preferred movie seats and movie-watching moods in the Ebert doc "Life Itself." / MAGNOLIA PICTURES

How does one review a film about the most famous film critic of all? The task would be harder if it wasn't very good. "Life Itself" is a documentary about the late Roger Ebert and his final months before his passing last spring. Like Ebert's prolific writing, it makes its subject universal. As promised by its title, it's a downright cosmic look at existence even as it stays strictly personal.

Although the film covers Ebert's life in great detail and with a celebratory air, it's not afraid to delve into his lows. Chief among these are the '70s, when Ebert would wrap up the day's writing (done at a brisk pace despite the typewriter) and then head out for all-night drinking binges. This period is still shown as fun, but also as the kind of freewheeling living that eventually becomes a drag.

Director Steve James ("Hoop Dreams," championed 20 years ago by Siskel and Ebert) gets a lot out of toggling between straight-up exposition about Ebert's life and hanging with he and his wife, Chaz, as they prepare for the worst. These modern-day scenes have great power, observing as a materialist — who fully expected to return to the nothing from which he came — grapples with the notion that his consciousness will soon disappear.

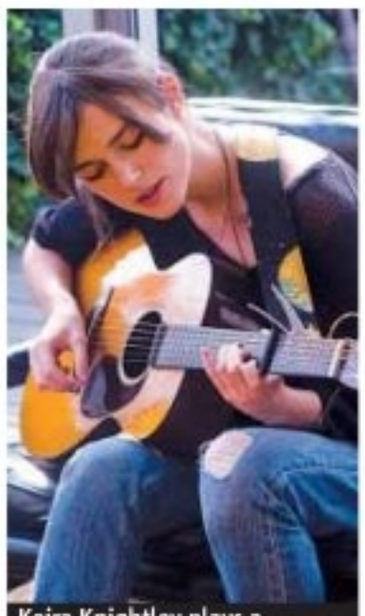
Indie. Convenient lies and predictable plots

'Begin Again'

John Carney, the filmmaker of "Once," returns to the "stealth musical" genre, this time in New York City, with Mark Ruffalo as an A&R guy making a new(ish) kind of album with shy songwriter/hesitant musician Keira Knightley. The film addresses some tough questions about the collapsing music biz, but it repeatedly deflates into calming movie lies. Even Ruffalo's anxious performance as a desperate, self-destructive label guy can't temper the sometimes toxic earnestness.



Keira Knightley plays a musician in "Begin Again."
THE WEINSTEIN COMPANY

'Yves Saint Laurent'

The first of two new films on the fashion titan, this is the one that takes the boring biopic approach, portraying him (played by Pierre Niney) as your routine budding genius who finds his groove, finds drugs then finds redemption before the end credits. Saint Laurent changed the world; the film just follows procedure.

Pierre Niney tends to a model in "Yves Saint Laurent."
THE WEINSTEIN COMPANY

'Third Person'

Paul Haggis returns to the multi-character format of his Oscar-winning "Crash," spinning three tales about love and loss, including one with Liam Neeson as a novelist rolling around with his mistress (Olivia Wilde). Unlike with "Crash," which uncovered racism in Los Angelinos, Haggis isn't trying to guide us toward a single thesis; he's trying to get us to let our minds roam, like a master novelist would in a sprawling, assured tome. But Haggis isn't a master, and the more "Third Person" starts to unify its three sections — in ways both "mind-blowing" and routine — the more clumsy it becomes. Worse, it indulges in Haggis' most awful tendency: third act surprise twists that turn unspeakably heavy subjects into mere cheap "gotchas."

Liam Neeson takes a mistress in "Third Person."

Online dating is a dirty little lie: Part 2

Like some people you meet online, Internet dating isn't all it's cracked up to be. Here's part two of my investigation into what really happens in the realm of online dating.

A predatory environment

If you think your night club is the quintessential "meat market," you ain't seen nothin' yet. The online dating world is fraught with pick-up artists. I interviewed 50 men who use online dating sites to meet women. Here's a sample:

From G.S. in New York: "Maybe they want a relationship, so I tell them I want one, too. ... It doesn't matter what I say, because once I get in there, I probably won't see her again."

From E.B. in Chicago: "It usually only takes me a short email to get her interested. From there, I just pour on the charm. A smile, a little shy attitude over coffee, and she's mine."

This type of man tends to send emails out to lots of women — with the end goal of having sex.

For exclusive commentary, visit Metro.us/blogs.

Consider the financial operations of online dating sites

The business of online dating is business, not love. Don't say I didn't warn you.

The longer a dating site can keep you unmatched, the more it can profit.

My opinion? Any time you put people on one side, and the potential of love on the other, you will find someone in the middle with their greedy little paws out. (See more about this to the left.)

Up: After a mother in Ottawa, Canada, was scolded by a customer for nursing her baby inside a Starbucks, a young male barista came to her defense.

Down: World Cup Sex Ban. Bosnia, Russia, Chile and Mexico were all under orders not to have sex during the World Cup — and they are all out of the running.

By the numbers

$239

According to brokerage company ConvergEx Group, the typical dating site customer spends an average $239 every year in their quest to find love — just under $20 a month. If those monthly subscribers were to find love quickly, they wouldn't stay subscribed to the site very long. But if the site is doing its job, why would anyone have to spend $239 over 12 months to find someone with whom they click?

What we're into this week

Romantic comedies are pervasive in our society. But from Disney to "Pretty Woman," they are setting an unreachable goal for love. Learn more at www.goodmenproject.com.

Porn is fine as adult entertainment, but it's not sex education — and for many men, that's what's unfortunately happening.

An unexpected break-up not only affects your sense of self-worth, it makes you wonder how long they were just going through the motions.

Braids to beat the heat

City humidity doesn't mean you have to spend summer in ponytails and messy buns. DreamDry senior stylist Faith Huffnagle shares with us three beautiful braided styles that not only look awesome, but will keep you cool. Bonus: All three styles are easier to do when your hair is a little dirty, so go ahead and hit snooze. EMILY LAURENCE

Beginner braider

1 The Braid

This fishtail braid looks elaborate, but it seriously only takes five minutes to do. Part your hair and divide it into two sections. Huffnagle recommends a side part so your braid will land over your shoulder. Take a small part of the outer section of one of the two sections you divided your hair into and cross it over, adding it to the inside of the other hair section. Then, do the exact same thing with the other side. Secure the end with an elastic. Pro tip: "The smaller the sections are that you pull from the two bigger sections, the more delicate the braid will look," Huffnagle says.

Intermediate braider

2 The Juliette

The Juliette is perfect if you are going out to drinks with friends. Start by sectioning the top third part of your hair and dividing it into three sections. Start a regular braid, but after the first pull, drop one of the section parts and weave a new section part in with the other two. You will be adding to the two original sections all the way around your head, dropping one section with each pull, creating the cascading waterfall look. "If a layer ends, just connect it to another piece of hair and continue," Huffnagle advises. Use a curling wand to create the soft waves.

Expert braider

3 The Bianca

This crown braid has a bohemian look, making it perfect for summer. Start by grabbing a 4-inch section of hair behind your ear. Then, divide that section in to three equal parts, like you would to start a normal braid. What makes this outside braid different from a normal braid is that you are constantly moving the center section, pulling it over both ways. The front piece ends up joining the back piece, very similarly to a French braid. Keep going around your head by pulling more hair from the top all the way around.

As you braid, make sure it's tight; you can pull it apart a little at the end to loosen it. Once you get all the way around your head, finish braiding any extra hair, secure it with an elastic and pin it behind your ear or in the back. Pull the braid apart a bit to make it look more relaxed.

CELEBRATIONS

Party on the Parkway

Friday, noon to 7 p.m.
Ben Franklin Pkwy., between 20th Street and Eakins Oval
Free, www.welcomeamerica.com
The big names are of course reserved for the Philly 4th of July Jam in the evening with The Roots, Nicki Minaj, Ed Sheeran and more. But the Parkway will already have been bouncin' all day long with multiple music stages, activities and vendors to keep you stoked from high noon to sundown. Stick around for the concert, starting at 7 p.m., and the fireworks.

America's Birthday Party

Friday, 1 p.m.
Independence Visitor Center Sixth and Market streets
Free, 800-537-7676
www.phlvisitorcenter.com
Rarely is history so delicious. A woman claiming to be Betsy Ross (please suspend your disbelief) will present a giant American flag made out of cupcakes — the world's largest, we're told — courtesy of Termini Bros. Bakery, but baked to Betsy's specifications, of course. And everyone gets a piece, because this is America, and in America, there are cupcakes for everyone.

Independence Day Regatta

Friday through Sunday
Boathouse Row
Free, www.independencedayregatta.com
This massive rowing competition consists of a variety of different races in men's, women's and mixed groups. The festivities have been held this time of year since the event's inception in 1880, when it was known as "The People's Regatta" — a name it retained until 1958, but it was apparently behooved during the Cold War to switch to something less Marxist-sounding.

Independence Day Fireworks Extravaganza Cruise

Saturday, 7 p.m.
The Ben Franklin Yacht
Pier 24, 401 N. Columbus Blvd.
$65, 21-plus only
215-629-8687
benfranklinyacht.ticketleap.com
If we were Ben Franklin, this is how we'd watch the fireworks — from the deck of a boat named after us, with a dance party and an all-out barbecue dinner to boot. After all, didn't Ben Franklin say, "Verily, you cannot be called famous before you've a yacht named in your honour"? Probably not, but still, he could've said it.

Battleship New Jersey Fireworks Viewing

Saturday, 7 p.m.
Battleship New Jersey, 62 Battleship Pl., Camden; $10; 866-877-6262
battleshipnewjersey.ticketleap.com
Viewing Fourth of July fireworks from the deck of a ship that actually fought for America on far-off seas will bring out the patriot in you. Plus, on the pier, you've got surf-rock band the Hypersonics playing awesome tunes, and for kids there's the Philadelphia Zoo on Wheels petting zoo and face painting.

FOOD

All-You-Can-Eat Super Scooper

Friday through Sunday
Penn's Landing, Walnut St. and Columbus Blvd.
$7, 856-310-5674
www.jkf.org
This annual smorgasbord of ice cream and water ice features offerings from some of the best, including Haagen-Dazs, Ben and Jerry's, Good Humor-Breyers, Turkey Hill, Philadelphia Water Ice Company, Friendly's, Rosati Italian Water Ice and many more just too delicious to ignore. Proceeds go to the Joshua Kahan Fund to support kids with leukemia.

www.constitutioncenter.org
The Constitution Center has a variety of events in store this weekend, including authentic colonial music concerts, Founding Father impersonators, a recreated Revolutionary War encampment with demonstrations of military muster, the medicine of the era and crafts, edu-taining kid's activities, an Independence Day show giving you the historical rundown and a lesson on proper flag etiquette.

MUSIC

POPS! On Independence

Thursday, 8 p.m.
Outside Independence Hall, Sixth and Chestnut streets; Free
www.welcomeamerica.com
Pull up a blanket, plop down on the grass and enjoy a free outdoor concert of patriotic music from the Philly POPS, featuring guest soloist Capathia Jenkins, a singer known for her work on Broadway as well as her Bacharach/David renditions, among other things. Fun fact: The Philly POPS are the largest stand-alone pops orchestra in America.

US Army Band Pershing's Own and Fireworks

Saturday, 8 p.m.
Great Plaza at Penn's Landing, Columbus Blvd. and Chestnut St.; Free; 215-629-3200, www.delawareriverwaterfront.com
If the pop and hip-hop lineup of the 4th of July Jam isn't to your tastes, a decidedly more traditional sort of Independence Day concert takes place July 5 at Penn's Landing with the U.S. Army Band — a highly distinguished ensemble with a history dating back to 1922. The Adventure Aquarium waterfront fireworks celebration follows.

Pursuit of pleasure is not protected

Re: 'Doctor says Hobby Lobby case amounts to ... ' (Metro, July 2) Dr. Rubin asks what will be the end result of cutting abortion and contraception access. Less casual sex and more committed relationships, if not more marriage, perhaps? While some women may rely on birth control for health reasons other than pregnancy prevention or termination, this is not the type of health care employers are conscientiously concerned about. Besides, while freedom of religion is a federally recognized and protected right, freedom to have sex without consequences is a right no one can grant to anyone.

It's not a sin to compromise

Re: 'Don't give 'em an inch' (Metro, June 30) Chuck Fazio has fallen for the fallacy that there can be no gun legislation, at all, without the infringement of Second Amendment rights. This is simply not the case, and ignores the spirit of the original law. Perhaps if gun rights advocates stopped parroting the positions of the gun manufacturers, we could have some useful legislation. "Uncompromising" is not a compliment — it is a curse.

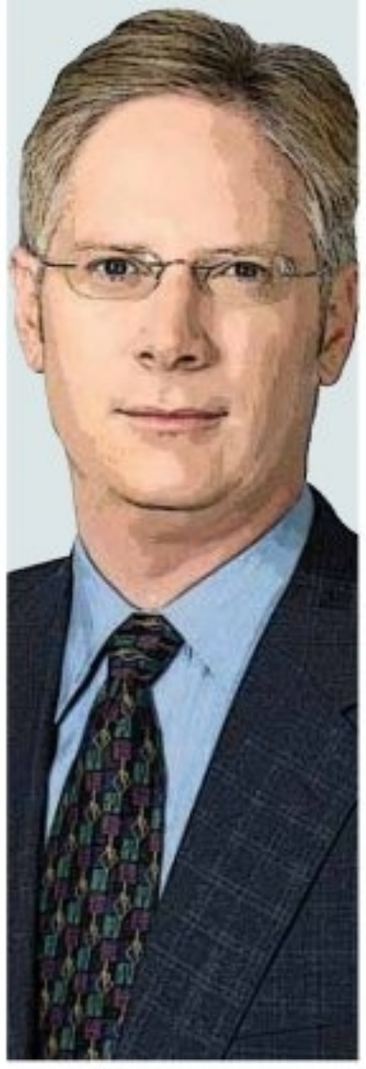
Opinion

TOM FOREMAN
POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN



CNN=POLITICS

In an ironic twist this week, leading up to Independence Day, we found out that Facebook has been conducting secret, Orwellian mind-control experiments on the American public. Along with some university researchers, Facebook manipulated the newsfeeds for some half-million people in 2012, pushing more positive stories at some, and more negative ones at others. And, surprise, those who received the Debbie Downer stories were more likely to post their own buzz kills.

Thank heavens for this groundbreaking research, otherwise we would have had to rely on, oh, say, any depressive seventh grader who could have told us the same thing.

This adds to my long suspicion that Mark Zuckerberg is a megalomaniac who lives in an underground fortress of glowing screens, where he wiggles his fingers and bellows, "Soon the whole world will be under my control! Mwahahaha!"

Why he wants us jumping like mice in a shock maze is anyone's guess. My favorite theory is that once he has us in his spell he'll make us chase the Winklevoss twins down the eastern seaboard with our teeth chattering like Willard's rats. He might also sell us all into sex slavery in Paris — but as long as Liam Neeson is around, that could prove problematic. "I have a very particular set of skills that will make me a nightmare, Mr. Zuckerberg. And I'll start by posting some embarrassing photos of you at the beach!"

Users are understandably peeved. It's bad enough that the NSA is tracking our phone calls, we don't need sneaky social engineers fiddling with our emotions like the knobs of an old radio. Facebook calls it routine consumer research, and of course if you don't want to be guinea pigged you can always kill your Facebook account. But the whole affair fits into growing voter concern about overreach by the government, by corporations, by everyone who thinks citizens are simply there to be mined at will for information, dollars, clicks and votes … even on July 4.

Anyway, I'm going to unfriend those sneaks. But first, I feel oddly and unexpectedly compelled to buy a new smartphone.

No. 5

Kyle Kendrick

Kyle Kendrick has been as inconsistent as the offense. Kendrick, who is also eligible for free agency after the season, is an innings eater who rarely misses a start. He would make for a solid four on a contender.

5 Phillies most likely to be dealt

Since the majority of teams still have hope of earning a playoff berth, the demand for help is high. That's good news for the Phillies, who can't be anything but sellers. The "for sale" sign must go up not just since the Phillies are lagging in last place in the mediocre NL East. Ryne Sandberg's squad has been incredibly inconsistent and has failed to come through with timely hits. It might be wise for the Phillies to deal sooner than later before more teams drop out of contention.

However, it's not going to be easy to figure out who the Phillies will trade since some players have huge contracts (Cliff Lee, Cole Hamels), full-no trade (Jimmy Rollins, Chase Utley) and a number of issues (Jonathan Papelbon).

ED CONDRAN
@EDDIESCORES
sports@metro.us

Jonathan Papelbon

Yes, Papelbon is overpaid and has more baggage than Lindsay Lohan. But even though his velocity has plummeted, Pap has been effective in 2014.

Visit Metro.us to see how low the Phillies fell in our power rankings.

BYRD IS OWED $4 MILLION MORE THIS SEASON.

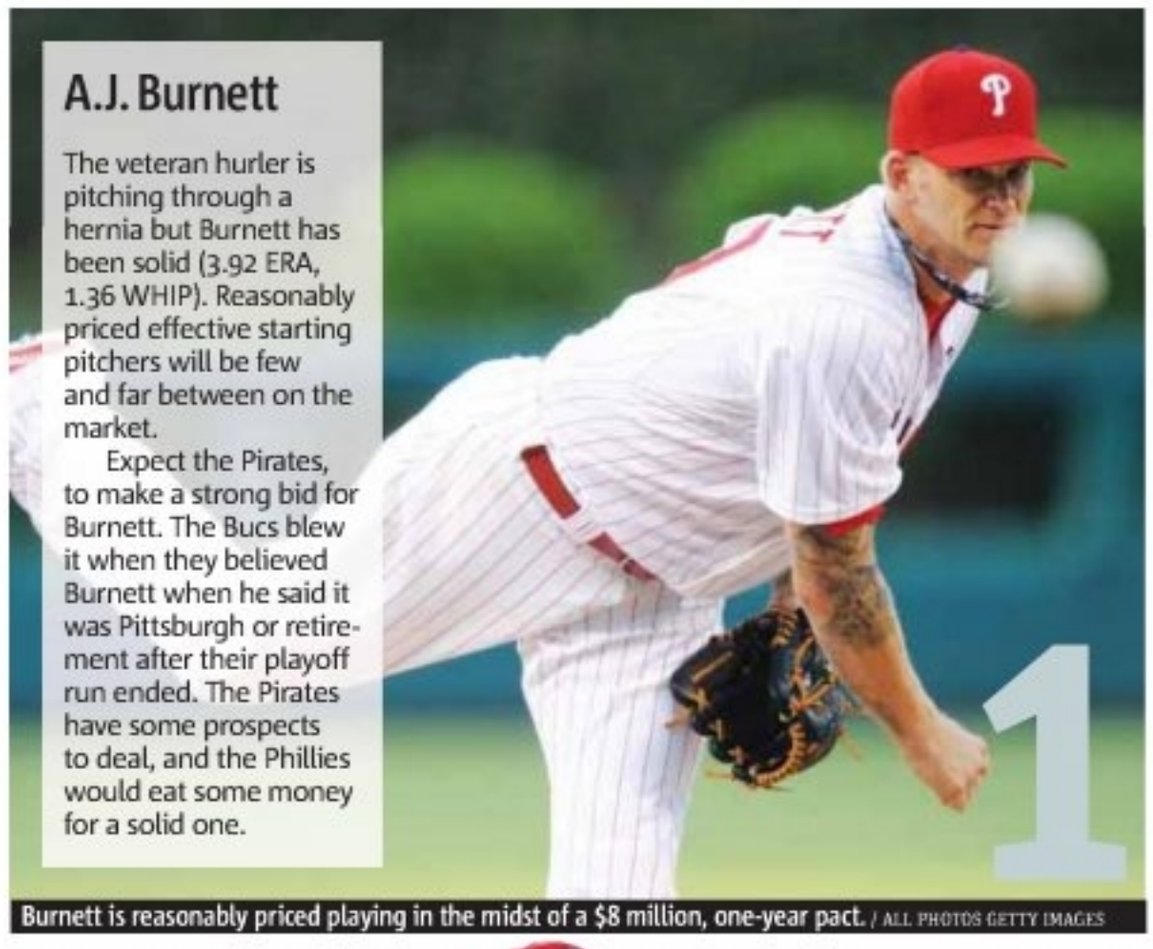
Marlon Byrd

Yes, Byrd strikes out a lot (he's on pace for 188 for the season). But the experienced rightfielder has been productive. He leads the Phillies with 16 homers and an .820 OPS. Byrd also has 49 RBIs. He's a very good rightfielder and he's great in the clubhouse.

A.J. Burnett

The veteran hurler is pitching through a hernia but Burnett has been solid (3.92 ERA, 1.36 WHIP). Reasonably priced effective starting pitchers will be few and far between on the market.

Expect the Pirates, to make a strong bid for Burnett. The Bucs blew it when they believed Burnett when he said it was Pittsburgh or retirement after their playoff run ended. The Pirates have some prospects to deal, and the Phillies would eat some money for a solid one.

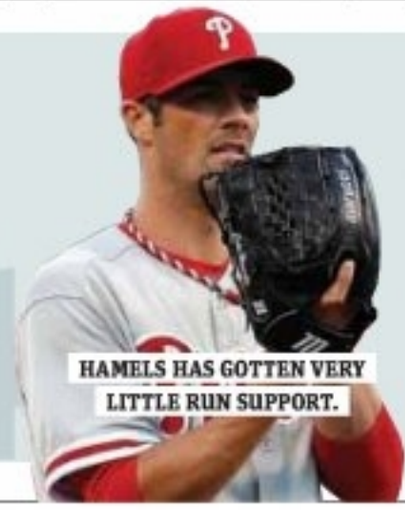


Burnett is reasonably priced playing in the midst of a $8 million, one-year pact. / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Cole Hamels

It won't be easy to deal Hamels due to his massive contract and limited no-trade, but he is the Phillie who would bring in the biggest haul of prospects. Amaro would have to receive a motherlode to deal his homegrown ace. The Phillies have to at least think about dealing their biggest piece.

Hamels would be very attractive to contenders since he is young and pitching as well as any hurler in the game. A change of scenery could be huge for Hamels.



HAMELS HAS GOTTEN VERY LITTLE RUN SUPPORT.

Embiid excited start NBA career

NBA. The 76ers' first pick in the draft can't wait to work his way back.

Had Joel Embiid not suffered a foot injury, he probably would have gone No. 1 to the Cleveland Cavaliers. Or at least No. 2 to the Milwaukee Bucks.

But Embiid fell to No. 3, and the Philadelphia 76ers took a chance and drafted the 7-foot center from Kansas. Since the Sixers are in a complete rebuilding process, it was worth the risk.

Embiid's upside was simply too good to pass up.

As a freshman, he averaged 11.2 points and 8.1 rebounds on his way to earning the Big 12 Defensive Player of the Year award. Embiid also blocked 72 shots for the Jayhawks.

Statistics don't define Embiid. Keep in mind that Embiid has played organized basketball for only three years. A native of Cameroon, he was raised playing soccer and volleyball. Amazing.

"Going forward, I see myself as a forward," Embiid said on a conference call with reporters on Monday afternoon. "I think my shot is getting a lot better. I'm working on my handle and passing skills. I feel like I can become a forward."

NBA. Sixers' future star determined to be worthy of No. 3 pick

Sixers draftee Joel Embiid is expected to be sidelined for five-to-eight months and possibly the entire 2014-15 season.

He's working out and meeting with his doctors on a daily basis. When the time is right, he'll be prepared to perform in front of the Philadelphia fans.

"I am just thinking about recovery," Embiid said. "I want to get back on the court whenever I can, when I am 110 percent. I am going to work on everything, and come back whenever I can."

Embiid has never been to Philadelphia and can't wait to test out the best cheesesteaks in town.

On the court, he has a lot to prove.

"I love the fact that they took a chance on me," Embiid said. "I love the fact that they believe in me. I won't disappoint them." ANDY JASNER

Life changed

Joel Embiid, who didn't start playing basketball until age 15 in his native Cameroon, spoke about how his life will never be the same again.

- "This is crazy. I still can't believe it. For me, it's just an example to show people anything is possible. That's the message I want to send to everybody — anything's possible."

On Twitter

PARKER LEADS NBA ROOKIES

Young players are a huge part of the tanking movement currently going on in the NBA. Not only do teams give their prized (yet raw) assets experience, but they also lose games and acquire future high draft picks in the process.

It leads to rookies getting more playing time than they often deserve. We saw it last year as Michael Carter-Williams rode the Sixers' up-tempo style and lack of talent to Rookie of the Year honors. These players drafted last week will have instant impacts on fantasy leagues.

Parallel Parker

Always this class' most NBA-ready player offensively, Jabari Parker lands in one of the most fantasy-friendly situations. At 6-foot-8 and 235 pounds with a smooth mid-range jumper and rugged ability to finish near the rim, Parker is a near lock to lead rookies in scoring. Expect a season like Carmelo Anthony's rookie campaign: 21 points, 6.1 rebounds, 2.8 assists and 0.8 3-pointers per game.

Little Elf

We can see what the Magic are doing very clearly. They traded away Arron Afflalo and waived Jameer Nelson, paving the way for their back court of the future: Elfrid Payton and Victor Oladipo. Both players will have tons of breakout appeal, but Payton figures to come at a fraction of the price because he's such an unknown. We do know as a senior, Payton averaged 21.4 points, 6.7 rebounds, 6.6 assists and 2.3 steals.
